Heathcote Botanical Gardens the Green Heart of the Treasure Coast

Heathcote Botanical Gardens celebrates thirty-five years as a public, not-for-profit garden – a living museum with several outdoor community galleries.

Heathcote offers a variety of options for unspoiled education and enrichment. The cornerstone of the five-acre public garden is the James J. Smith Bonsai Collection, the largest public assemblage of tropical bonsai in the United States. This highly valued live collection of over 100 bonsai was gifted to the Gardens in 2010 by James Smith.

Other Garden Galleries include the Palm & Cycad Walk, Tropical Rainforest, Farm-to-Table Garden and Children’s Garden. The Japanese Garden and Reflection Garden provide an area for introspection and relaxation.

Adams Pioneer House (built by noted OC “Pete” Peterson), offers visitors access to historic ranching life in our region; the Citrus Grove, along with the USDA Sustainable Bio-control Demonstration Project to reduce the spread of Asian Citrus Greening.

This urban green space holds as its mission to educate and inspire by providing a place of botanical beauty and to serve as a resource for the conservation of our environment.

“There is always music amongst the trees in the garden, but our hearts must be very quite to hear it.”
~ Minnie Aumonier
